TRUMP WILL NOT BLOCK COMEY'S TESTIMONY

1 President Donald Trump will not invoke executive privilege to block former FBI Director James Comey's scheduled testimony before Congress this week, the White House said. "In order to facilitate a swift and thorough examination of the facts sought by the Senate Intelligence Committee, President Trump will not assert executive privilege regarding James Comey's scheduled testimony,"

White House spokeswoman Sarah Sanders told reporters. Comey was leading a Federal Bureau of Investigation probe into alleged Russian meddling in last year's U.S. presidential election and possible collusion by Trump's campaign when the president fired him last month. REUTERS

FIVE PEOPLE KILLED BY FIRED WORKER IN FLA.

2 A man fired from his warehouse job in April returned to his old workplace near Orlando on Monday and fatally shot five people before killing himself, Orange County Sheriff Jerry Demings said. The 45-year-old suspect had a history of misdemeanor criminal offenses but was not linked to any terror organizations, Demings said at a press briefing. "He was a disgruntled employee that came back to this business this morning," said Demings. The unidentified assailant arrived at the company that makes accessories for recreational vehicles and campers at about 8 a.m. EDT armed with a handgun and a knife, Demings said. He did not use the knife but "shot five innocent people and then turned the gun on himself and killed himself," the sheriff said, adding seven people had survived. REUTERS

TRUMP'S PLAN FOR AIR TRAFFIC CONTROL

3 President Donald Trump outlined a plan to privatize the U.S. air traffic control system to modernize it and lower flying costs, but his proposal drew immediate criticism from Democrats who said it would hand control of a key asset to special interests and big airlines. Trump's proposal to spin off air traffic control from the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) was part of a weeklong White House focus on infrastructure. The administration is looking to shift the spotlight back onto Trump's agenda and away from a growing probe into alleged ties between his campaign and Russia. "We're proposing reduced wait times, increased route efficiency and far fewer delays," Trump said. REUTERS

FIFA 'IN CONTACT' WITH QATAR OVER WORLD CUP

5 Soccer's governing body FIFA said it was in "regular contact" with the organizing committee of the 2022 World Cup in Qatar, though it did not comment directly on the diplomatic situation involving the Gulf State. Saudi Arabia, Egypt, the United Arab Emirates and others severed ties with Qatar on Monday, accusing it of supporting terrorism and opening up the worst rift in years among some of the most powerful states in the Arab world. FIFA said in an emailed statement that it was "in regular contact with the Qatar 2022 Local Organizing Committee and the Supreme Committee for Delivery and Legacy handling matters relating to the 2022 FIFA World Cup." "We have no further comments for the time being," it added. Qatar's local World Cup organizing committee and the Asian Football Confederation which organizes international matches in the region, both declined to comment. REUTERS

Harvard rescinds some admission offers after students share offensive memes

School withdrew at least 10 acceptances after it discovered a racist, sexually explicit Facebook group chat made by incoming freshmen.

Harvard College said the school "does not comment publicly on the admission status of individual applicants."

The prestigious college has the right to withdraw an offer of admission for multiple reasons, including, "If an admitted student engages in behavior that brings into question their honesty, maturity or moral character."

This condition is conveyed to students when they receive their admission status and was also in the description of the official Harvard College Class of 2021 Facebook group.

Other reasons for a rescinded admission include if the student fails to graduate and receive a diploma and if any part of the application contains misrepresentations.

Employees at Harvard's admission office reportedly emailed students who posted the offensive memes in mid-April asking them to disclose what images they sent through the group, according to the Crimson.

"The admissions committee was disappointed to learn that several students in a private group chat for the Class of 2021 were sending messages that contained offensive messages and graphics," the email said, according to the Crimson. "As we understand, you were among the members contributing such material to this chat, we are asking that you submit a statement by tomorrow at noon to explain your contributions and actions for discussion with the admissions committee."

Not long after, at least 10 members of the group chat received letters stating that their offers of admission had been withdrawn.

Memes are an internet sensation, but they can also have real-world consequences.

At least 10 students accepted to Harvard College have had their admissions rescinded after sharing racist and "sexually explicit" memes in a Facebook group titled "Harvard memes for horny bourgeois teens," according to the Harvard Crimson.

The student paper reports incoming students posted memes that mocked "sexual assault, the Holocaust and the deaths of children." The paper obtained screenshots, but those images have not been released.

After finding each other in the official Harvard College Class of 2021 group, incoming students formed a separate Facebook group chat as a way to share memes and other pop-culture images. Then a "darker" group was formed as students split off of the main group.

Students who wanted access to the "dark" meme group reportedly had to post "provocative" memes to the first group.

Some of the messages shared there joked that "abusing children was sexually arousing"; another called the hypothetical hanging of a Mexican child "piñata time."

Boston city councilors call for hearing to explore impact of safe injection sites

Safe injection sites could help curb overdose deaths, according to studies, and the councilors want to explore the topic further.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Two Boston city councilors want to explore the impact of establishing safe injection sites on the city and state's devastating opioid epidemic.

The idea of safe injection sites — where addicts can inject drugs while being supervised by medical experts trained to treat overdoses and social workers who can help the addicts find a path to recover — is not completely new.

The concept is already established in places like

Vancouver and Australia, which prompted the Massachusetts Medical Society to call for a task force to look into a safe injection site pilot program back in May.

Jumping off of that effort, Councilors Annissa Essaibi-George and Frank Baker filed a request on Monday for a hearing to examine the effects of such a site in Boston.

"Boston needs to be front and center in the conversation about safe injection sites," Essaibi-George said in a statement. The city councilor at-large is also the chair of the committee on Homelessness, Mental Health and Recovery.

"Research shows that there are definitely some positive outcomes for facilities like this, especially in reducing overdose deaths. That being said, the centralization of services in Boston's neighborhoods has had serious impacts on our city and we need to hear from all sides," she said.

There are no safe injection sites yet in the United States, according to the councilors, though multiple cities are considering opening some as part of a "harm reduction strategy."

A safe injection site in Vancouver saw a 38 percent reduction in overdose deaths, according to a study cited by the Massachusetts Medical Society.

Massachusetts has seen a 350 percent increase in overdose deaths since 2000, according to the hearing order which cites the state Department of Public Health.

"As a city, we should be examining all measures to help those in our community struggling with opioid addiction," said Baker, the co-sponsor of the hearing order, in a statement. "Holding this hearing will give us the opportunity to ask questions and learn more about safe injection sites and any potential impact to our city."

Essaibi-George has previously said that she wants to explore more safe disposal practices for used needles and an expansion of the Mobile Sharps Team as well. That team has collected about 20,000 needles since March 2015, according to the councilor.

Bill Cosby told his accuser pills would relax her, prosecutor says

The former TV star has denied any wrongdoing and said the encounter was consensual.

The last words that Bill Cosby's accuser heard before drifting into semi-consciousness were that the pills he had given her would help her relax, a Pennsylvania prosecutor said at the start of the comedian's trial Monday.

But the pills left the woman, Andrea Constand, unable to resist the alleged sexual assault as she lay on a couch in his suburban Philadelphia home in 2004, Assistant DA Kristen Feden told jurors.

"Trust, betrayal and the inability to consent — that's what this case is about," Feden said, as Cosby listened a few feet away, brows furrowed.

Dozens of women have accused the 79-year-old entertainer of sexual assault, but Constand's case against the man she considered a mentor is the only one that was recent enough for criminal prosecution.

Defense attorney Brian McMonagle countered that Cosby, whose star burned brightest in the 1980s TV hit "The Cosby Show," is the victim of false accusations. He said that Constand's initial allegations were investigated in 2005 and found to be insufficient at that time.

"Today I get a chance, with your help, to right a wrong," he told jurors. "I get a chance, with your help, to protect a man from the destruction of the rest of his life."

Cosby's defense has taken aim at his accuser's credibility. GETTY IMAGES

The allegations have effectively ended Cosby's long career, built on a family friendly style of comedy that had earned him the moniker "America's dad."

Cosby walked into the Montgomery County Court of Common Pleas outside Philadelphia, on the arm of Keshia Knight Pulliam who played the pigtailed Rudy Huxtable in the show.

Cosby has denied any wrongdoing and said the encounter with Constand, who worked at Temple University, his alma mater, was consensual.

McMonagle took aim at Constand's credibility, focusing on inconsistencies in her accounts to law enforcement officials in 2005.

Constand, who did not report the alleged assault for nearly a year, initially told police she had not maintained contact with Cosby after the incident. In fact, McMonagle said, she called him 53 times.

Prosecutors said they will call a psychologist to testify that victims of sexual trauma sometimes engage in seemingly irrational behavior, including maintaining a relationship with their assailants.

Another accuser whom Feden identified as Kelly Johnson will also testify during the trial. Johnson, who like Constand sought out Cosby's career advice, was also drugged and sexually assaulted in a "strikingly similar" manner in 1996, Feden said.

McMonagle dismissed her account, noting she only came forward in 2015.

Prosecutors will use Cosby's own words against him, including a deposition taken during Constand's civil lawsuit in which he said he gave her Benadryl and admitted he had given the sedative Quaalude to young women with whom he wanted to have sex.

It was the unsealing of that deposition in 2015 that prompted prosecutors to reopen the Constand criminal investigation, more than a decade after it was first closed.

The jurors will not hear about Constand's lawsuit and the settlement that Cosby signed, though his testimony is fair game.

They will also not hear about any allegations against Cosby aside from those of Constand and Johnson. REUTERS

White House aides say media 'obsessed' with Trump tweets, claim social media isn't policy

White House aides are scrambling to pedal back a series of early morning tweets by President Donald Trump.

Adviser to the president Kellyanne Conway and Sebastian Gorka, deputy assistant to the president, both hit the airwaves Monday morning to chastise the media for its coverage of Trump's Twitter messages, saying the media shouldn't consider Trump's tweets as policy.

On CNN, Gorka said he finds it really disappointing to hear mainstream media "obsess" about Trump's tweets. In a series of four tweets just after 3 a.m. Monday, Trump discussed the need for his travel ban on several majority Muslim nations in the wake of the Manchester and London terror attacks.

In his first tweet at 3:25 a.m., Trump said,

"People, the lawyers and the courts can call it whatever they want, but I am calling it what we need and what it is, a TRAVEL BAN!"

The administration has long populations, which is a fine political argument to make and let people judge it," CNN host Chris Cuomo said in an interview with Gorka.

"One hundred characters is not policy. It's social media. You know the difference, right?" Gorka said.

President Trump

Gorka added, "Let's talk about policy. I'd like to talk about policy, not tweets."

"It's his words, his thoughts," Cuomo shot back. "What are you saying, we shouldn't listen to what the president says?"

Conway echoed Gorka's position in an interview Monday morning on NBC's "Today" show.

"This obsession with covering everything he says on Twitter and very little of what he does as president," Conway complained.

"Today" host Craig

Melvin said the president has established that he uses Twitter as a mechanism to bypass what he calls the "dishonest media."

"That's his preferred method of communication with the American people. He hasn't given an interview in three weeks, so lately it has been his preferred method." ERIN TIERNAN

WTF is wrong with you, Rudy?

This is disturbing on many levels.
ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Keisha Knight Pulliam, an actress who found fame as youngest daughter Rudy on "The Cosby Show," joined Bill Cosby for the first day of his sexual-assault trial. My question, dear ones, is WTF?

The 38-year-old was seen strolling into court with Cosby, just a-smiling, and I assume skipping to a tune that only the two of them could hear. Typically, defendants in a trial such as this one don't go to the courtroom with such an unbridled sense of joy. But Cosby and Knight Pulliam are having the best time and it's all very disturbing!

Cosby, 79, is accused of drugging and sexually assaulting former Temple University employee Andrea Constand in 2004 in his mansion in Elkins Park, Pennsylvania. He faces (and has denied) similar allegations from more than 60 women.

His spokesperson, who appears to be a low-level Sean Spicer-type, says it's not even about like, being guilty or innocent, you know? "[Keisha is] not here to proclaim guilt or innocence... She wants people to stop listening to the sensationalism and come hear the truth."

So again, I ask of you — WTF, Rudy?

Halle isn't pregnant, she just had a satisfying meal

Over the weekend, a gentle breeze blew through the dark corners of the internet, whispering, "Is Halle Berry pregnant, or nah?" Looking at the photo, I thought to myself — "That doesn't look pregnant. That looks like someone enjoyed a few healthy helpings of Chipotle," having done the same thing just moments before.

Turns out, the thrice di-

We've all been there, girl.

vorced 50-year-old was on the same page. Berry took to Instagram to offer a clear and concise message. "Can a girl have some steak and fries?" Yes, Halle. A girl can.

Her rep also went on the defense, speaking with Page Six to put the rumors at rest. "It is completely untrue. She is not pregnant."

Rumors started flying after Berry attended the Chrysalis Butterfly Ball in Los Angeles on Sunday. She awkwardly cradled her abdomen most of the time, which is not something one typically does when their baby is composed chiefly of food. It was pretty confusing!

But yeah, note to all: Don't come for a lady with a slight bloat.

Liam Gallagher and Noel Gallagher are still feuding, BTW

Liam Gallagher is going after his brother Noel. The reason? Because Noel wasn't at the One Love Manchester benefit.

Liam performed at the concert, organized by Ariana Grande following the terrorist attack at her own concert two weeks ago. Liam, who is infected with a late stage of Twitter fingers, took to the app to detail his displeasure with his older brother and former Oasis bandmate.

"What an amazing night last night pure love vibrations nobody comes close to Manchester love forever," he wrote, ignoring the basic concepts of syntax and punctuation.

"Noels out of the f—king country weren't we all," he wrote. "Love get on a f—king plane and play your tunes for the kids you sad f—k." Oh, dear.

Liam and Noel's relationship is famously contentious, even though they are 44 years old and 50 years old, respectively. Liam talked about the strained relationship on BBC Radio

One last week, saying "Everyone knows I love our kid. He doesn't speak to me, we don't speak to each other... It's all very sad, but we'll get over it."

To be honest, I wish they would get over with it sooner rather than later.

Two-hit wonder Tyga maybe wrote a song about Kylie

Shameless former Kardashian-Jenner mooch Tyga has written a new song. And it is probably most definitely about Kylie Jenner herself.

The 27-year-old released a track imaginatively titled "Playboy" on Saturday, and it is something.

"Super freak in my passenger / She a superstar / She got it bad for me / If I hang up, she call right back to me / You cut her legs off / She crawls right back to me / I call it playboy tenacity." Big props to Tyga for having the wherewithal to use a thesaurus and discover the word "tenacity."

Now this is what the youths call a "subtweet," I believe.

But also? This could literally be about anybody — but having people think it's about Kylie will definitely give this mediocre song the boost it sorely needs.

Jenner and Tyga most recently crossed paths at Coachella, and they weren't exactly happy to see each other. In fact, they shared an awkward hug and Jenner "looked sad" — probably in an attempt to prove to the world that she has the real-life capacity to emote, just like a "Westworld" host.

I, for one, am not convinced!

John Slattery on what a real leader looks like (not Trump)

The "Mad Man" alum talks playing Eisenhower in "Churchill," fake news and "Veep."

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

John Slattery isn't a fan of our sitting POTUS. You can even see that in the films and TV shows he makes. "Spotlight" is a valentine to journalism; "Veep" (on which he played Selina Meyer's boyfriend last season) is a darkly funny look at the White House. Right now, he has the movie "Churchill," an account of the lead-up to D-Day, when Britain's prime minister (played by Brian Cox) dukes it out with Slattery's Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower about whether one of the biggest battles of World War II was a good idea or not. Watching two of the most legendary leaders of the 20th century, one can't help but wish people like them were in

This obviously wasn't the intention when you shot this, but it's surreal watching a movie about great, inspiring leaders in an age when America has one who's none of those things.

You think? Not that there aren't great world leaders in other parts of the world. Other parts of the world seem to still be going after the best and the brightest. I do think it's interesting that [Trump] kept referring to her as "Crooked Hillary," and here we are, three and a half months in, and he's being investigated eight ways from Sunday.

It's hard not to wish for a Churchill or an Eisenhower right now. Even if you didn't always agree with their actions, you respected them.

You know what it is? Eisenhower was a trusted individual from start to finish, whether it was to get a job done or to motivate someone to give you his straight opinion.

He was smart, he was a student of history. He wasn't known as a great strategist or a great field commander. But he could deal with people. He had the trust of everyone. He didn't have to be the smartest guy in the room. I think that's what a great leader is — someone who lets the best ideas win. We're so far from where we ought to be in that regard. I don't mean just You Know Who. It's also the partisanship that's ruining us. If someone has a good idea, let's use it.

No one wants to work together. It's blind and uncompromising allegiance to the party. They're just there to stay there. They get to Washington, then they realize, "This is where I want to be. I'm going to do whatever I need to stay here, in power."

It sounds a lot like "Veep," actually, where everyone is just a venal careerist. It's less interesting than "Veep." Or it's more surreal. It's crazier. And they keep saying, "These shows stole our

On journalism

"Spotlight" is another thing you did that keeps seeming more and more relevant. That film is about journalism at its best, and right now it's under fire. I don't know if it's worse, actually. Obviously there's the fake news cycle, but this is what journalism is supposed to do. It's suppose to withstand the malpractice of institutions and uncover them. When someone calls it "fake news" so they can blanket everything set against them as fake news, real journalism will withstand that. It will be uncovered if someone acts in an untoward way. It seems like it's working. It certainly seems to be getting under their skin.

storylines," whether it's "House of Cards" or "Veep." They say, "We thought up the most insane treatment of this group of people, and they're nothing close to what's actually happening."

Healthy smoothies to beat the heat

A cold refreshing smoothie hits the spot on a sweltering day. ISTOCK

Cool off with these refreshing recipes.

KATE MOONEY
@yatinbrooklyn
kate.mooney@metro.us

Pump up the AC and grab a cold drink, because it is full-on, sultry summer. After the longest winter ever, the season of sweat is here, and we need some relief. On 80-plus-degree days, there's nothing better than a cold, refreshing smoothie — especially when you're so overheated, you can't even stomach a whole meal. What should you be sipping on, and how can you be sure it's actually good for you? "The best smoothies for you are those that have a combination of fiber and protein without a lot of added sugar," explains nutritionist Kerri Gans.

For protein, she recommends Greek yogurt, cottage cheese, low-fat milk, soy milk or nut butter. Get your fiber by way of greens and fruit; and healthy fats are good — avocado, chia or flax seeds, for example — but she cautions that you should include only one serving, to keep the calorie count down.

A typical breakfast smoothie shouldn't be more than 350-450 calories, she says; and if your smoothie is your snack, aim for around 200. She shares her orange splash smoothie, (350 calories, 27g protein, 8g fiber), which combines yogurt, strawberries, a quarter cup of orange juice and chia seeds. For the recipe: kerri.gansnutrition.com.

For holistic-health coach and nutritionist Kerri Axelrod, avocado, berries and maca powder (an herb and a superfood) are her go-to smoothie ingredients. Her maca green smoothie bowl combines spinach, unsweetened almond milk, banana and maca powder. For a garnish, she mixes it up — chia or hemp seeds, blueberries and shredded coconut are all favorite toppings.

"I love maca for its adaptogenic properties to help fight off stress and fatigue," Axelrod explains. "I also notice an increase in mental and physical energy levels when using maca regularly. Avocado provides healthy fats to keep you satiated but also make the smoothie bowl creamy, and berries being lower on the glycemic index than tropical fruits commonly used in smoothie bowls."

Lyssie Lakatos and Tammy Lakatos Shames, aka the Nutrition Twins, love a high-protein, low calorie Blueberry Banana Smoothie, combining blueberry and banana with kale, pineapple, Greek yogurt and coconut flakes. "Blueberries flood your body with anti-aging and disease-fighting phytonutrients and anti-inflammatory compounds, as well as bloat-fighting potassium and water," they write. Paired with the pineapple, it's a great source of Vitamin C, while kale provides detoxing properties.

GOOD FANTASY BARGAINS AS WE ENTER JUNE

Kyle Bishop is a lead MLB columnist at RotoBaller.com. His articles and Fantasy Baseball Rankings are your secret weapon for winning fantasy leagues.

At this point in the season, it can sometimes be difficult to find quality on the waiver wire. Here are five players who are available in at least 75 percent of Yahoo leagues and 60 percent of ESPN leagues.

Catcher: Austin Hedges, Padres (24 percent Yahoo, 22 percent ESPN) Hedges isn't perfect. He's hitting just .218, has been streaky and is striking out in nearly 30 percent of his plate appearances. Let's be honest, though — you're not going to find a flawless catcher on the wire in any league. Hedges leads all MLB backstops with 52 games played, and is one of only two players at the position who's cracked double digits in homers.

Middle infield: Jed Lowrie, Athletics (18 percent Yahoo, 36 percent ESPN) Lowrie is 33 years old and has played 150 games in a season just once in his career. That tells you all you need to know about his ability to stay healthy. Right now, though, he's playing every day and performing well. Lowrie appears to have bought into the fly ball revolution, and it's working; he's currently hitting .296/.365/.492 with 33 runs scored and seven homers.

Infield: Lucas Duda, Mets (20 percent Yahoo, 17 percent ESPN) Duda missed nearly a month with an elbow injury, and it took him another week or so to shake off the rust. Over the last two weeks, however, he's hit a blistering .372/.438/.884 with six homers, nine runs and 14 RBIs in just 11 games.

Outfield: Kevin Kiermaier, Rays (24 percent Yahoo, 32 percent ESPN) Kiermaier was awful at the plate in April, hitting just .220/.304/.300 and striking out nearly 30 percent of the time. He's been much better since the calendar flipped to May, with a .287/.359/.513 line, six homers, five steals and 33 R+RBI. Kiermaier managed a 12 HR, 21 SB season despite missing two months last year, and he's on pace to easily surpass those totals in 2017.

Starting pitcher: Mike Foltyniewicz, Braves (14 percent Yahoo, 13 percent ESPN) It's been a tough season on the pitching end of things for many fantasy owners, between the rash of injuries and the continuance of the leaguewide power surge that began in late 2015. Consequently, the waiver wire pickings are particularly slim. Foltyniewicz is worth considering if you can tolerate his inconsistency. Nearly half of the runs he's allowed so far came in his two worst starts. In the rest of his appearances, he's posted a 2.17 ERA, 1.23 WHIP and 3.1 K/BB.

Red Sox and Yankees ready to tangle for first place in AL East

The Red Sox-Yankees rivalry will resume tonight in the Bronx (7:05 p.m., NESN) with fresh faces leading each team.

No longer is David Ortiz powering the Sox. It's now Mookie Betts, Xander Bogaerts and Chris Sale. No longer is Alex Rodriguez Enemy No. 1 in Boston. Sox fans will hate Aaron Judge soon enough.

The three-game set begins tonight with Drew Pomeranz (5-3, 4.24 ERA) getting the ball for the Sox and Masahiro Tanaka (5-5, 6.34 ERA) throwing for the Yankees. Pomeranz has been exceptional of late, having allowed just six earned runs in his last four outings. Tanaka, meanwhile, has been mostly disastrous this season. On Opening Day way back on April 2, he gave up seven earned runs in 2.2 innings and in his last start, May 31 at Baltimore, he allowed seven earned runs in 5.2 innings.

Rick Porcello (3-7, 4.24 ERA) will start for the Sox on Wednesday and will be opposed by CC Sabathia (6-2, 4.12 ERA).

David Price (1-0, 3.00

ERA) will toe the rubber for Boston in the series finale on Thursday with Michael Pineda (6-3, 3.76 ERA) pitching for the Yanks.

Price has looked tremendous since returning from the disabled list. He's allowed just five hits total in two starts this season and gave up just one earned run in Saturday's 5-2 Red Sox win over the Orioles.

The Red Sox are 10-4 since May 21 and are just two games behind the surprising Yankees for first place in the division.

BRING BACK THE HATRED

The Red Sox split their series with the hated Orioles in Baltimore this past weekend and now their attention turns to their old rival, the Yankees. The Sox will begin a three-game series in the Bronx tonight, and they are just two games behind New York in the AL East standings.

The testiness between the Sox and the O's is fun, but Sox — Yankees is supposed to be the be-all and end-all when it comes to baseball vitriol.

Aside from a few scuffles here and there, Red Sox vs. Yankees hasn't been Red Sox vs. Yankees since 2006 — when the Yankees beat the Sox at Fenway five straight times in a key August series. That was really the last time there was clear hatred between the two franchises, as the Yanks haven't been that good when the Sox were World Series contenders and vice versa. The Yankees finished in third place when the Sox last won it all in 2013 and the Red Sox were swept in the wild card round by the Angels when the Yankees last won it all in 2009.

I don't expect to see many Massachusetts sixth graders walking around with those confusing "Yankee hater" hats this week, but it would be nice to see some emotion from both sides of "the Rivalry" this week.

THE ROTUND RYAN BROTHERS

WWE has had some renewed interest in its tag team division of late, but if it wants to take things to the level it was at in the early 1990s with the Hart Foundation, The Rockers and Demolition — it should immediately sign former NFL coaches and brothers, Rex and Rob Ryan.

Rex and Rob got into a bar fight with some trash talking NFL fans in Nashville, Tennessee this past weekend. Rex was appropriately wearing a Nationals Bryce Harper jersey, a week after Harper and Hunter Strickland traded blows on the field.

Rex, who was fired by the Bills late last season, could now be canned by ESPN (he joined the network in April) for this incident considering the Worldwide Leaders' hatred for anything controversial.

It'd be the perfect time for Vince McMahon to strike. Not only would the Ryan Bros. be WWE's heaviest team since Earthquake and Typhoon were "The Natural Disasters," they would also be able to cut a hell of a promo.

ARE YOU READY FOR SOME FOOTBALL?

How much has the political climate in the United States changed in the past six years?

Ask country music singer Hank Williams Jr., who was fired by ESPN in 2011 for indirectly comparing President Barack Obama to Adolf Hitler.

Williams Jr. said at the time that then-Speaker of the House John Boehner playing golf with Obama was akin to "Hitler playing golf with Netanyahu." Williams apologized for the comments.

ESPN announced on Monday that it will bring back "Bocephus" to sing the longtime intro to "Monday Night Football" this fall, the classic "Are you ready for some football?" (the song is actually titled, "All my rowdy friends are coming over tonight," but you shouldn't know or care about that).

We now live in an era where comparing a current politician to Hitler is commonplace. The "line" has become what Kathy Griffin did last week.

In other words, look for Griffin to host CNN's New Year's Eve coverage in 2023.

DURANT DREAMIN'

Don't expect any summer getaways this year, but the Celtics and Danny Ainge will surely place a phone call to Kevin Durant's people when NBA free agency begins on July 1. Whether or not Durant actually picks up the phone is up for debate.

Durant's exceptional Game 2 of the NBA Finals on Sunday night was likely more bad news for the Celtics and any other team with a pipe dream of landing Durant in free agency this summer. The Warriors have some major financial hoops to jump through with Steph Curry and Durant — not to mention Andre Iguodala and Shaun Livingston — up for new deals, but all of the latest reports look good for Bay Area fans. ESPN reported last week that Durant is willing to accept less than a max contract this summer to stay with the Warriors.

The only thing the Celtics can hope for now is that Curry becomes upset at the amount of attention Durant is getting during the Finals and forces the Warriors to choose between one of the two players this summer. There hasn't been much to suggest that will happen, but then again these are pro athletes with sizable egos.
